Jul 18, 2012 World of Planes 2.3[Flight Simulator] RealFlight Arcade [Flight Simulator] v6.0.1 A: For "unsupported" stuff, I highly recommend the Propellerheads Reason, or its free version ReaFa. It will allow you to edit any sample, and will have all the plugins you need for the RealWire, or the Fc909A. But if you are looking for software that will allow you to emulate many guitar effects for the Realflight 7, there is a bit of a gap in the market, as (as far as I know) none of the emulated effects are the very same as the originals - so you'll either end up doing a bit of DIY to get them to work, or end up using the Un-Emulator. As far as I know this is not possible: The most basic issue is that the Realflight 7 effects were all soldered to the daughterboard, so they cannot be swapped out for something else. Most of the effects use the same chips, so you cannot make them all work with the correct effects for your favourite guitar. So, unless someone wants to make a pretty small, simple plugin for it, it's not possible. If you are not a programmer, I'd recommend the Reason, it's very easy to learn, and once you've learned you'll be able to get a decent guitar sound from a jack plug. I've used Reason to build it's own very good emulation of the Soldano Synth, and it works great, but I suggest you find something similar that you like. Q: Teaching notes for different people I teach a lot of physics courses. I found that for different people I have to give different notes. For example, I think when I explain path integrals that I have to make them feel that they are doing some sort of research to get a deeper understanding of the subject. For example, I start with a physical problem and then solve it mathematically and conceptually rather than an anti-algebraic-mathematical way. The problem is I feel that my style makes the situation worse because I feel that I'm f678ea9f9e
